Each piece is painted in acrylic on canvas, then framed in handmade cedar frames from local wood. Working primarily with light, shadow, and vibrant colour, Veronica's artwork captures the dynamic essence of northern BC's wilderness. Her use of bold palettes and flowing lines reflects both the subtle serenity and dramatic energy of the environment she calls home. Whether it's the icy blues of snow-covered slopes or the vivid warmth of a sunset sky, her pieces celebrate the ever-shifting moods of nature.

Biography

Raised in the scenic mountain town of Terrace, British Columbia, Veronica grew up surrounded by the raw beauty of nature—towering peaks, dense forests, and ever-changing skies. This rugged landscape shaped her early relationship with the natural world and continues to be the heart of her creative inspiration.

A pivotal move to the Kispiox Valley for a forestry position marked a transformative chapter in Veronica's life. Immersed even more deeply in the rhythms of the wilderness, she discovered a passion for painting that allowed her to interpret and express the northern landscape in new ways.

Veronica's work serves as both a personal reflection and a tribute to the landscapes that shaped her—a vibrant reminder of the wild, untamed beauty of northern British Columbia.
